Little did David and Cassy Knight realize where their decision to homeschool their four children would lead them. As they strive to discover God's design for church and family, and to shield their growing children from a peer-focused, entertainment-driven youth culture, David and Cassy's own preconceptions are challenged again and again. As they lead their teenagers through the battles of rock music, peer pressure, purity, and even face decisions regarding government diplomas and college, the pressure to compromise mounts.

Yet will they go so far as to pull their children out of the church youth group? Wouldn't that be "un-Christian"? And what about dating, courtship, and marriage? David declares, "As for me and my house, we will serve the LORD." But what does that mean on a daily basis? The Knights are about to find out...

ELIZABETH WIENS

Elizabeth Wiens is passionate about God's call for parents to purposefully mentor their children for Him. She and husband, Gary, have been homeschooling their four daughters for fourteen years, and Elizabeth is involved in homeschool leadership in her community. Their family has enjoyed working together in children's ministry for almost sixteen years while serving full-time with Child Evangelism Fellowship. They are now ministering with GoodSeed Canada.
